

SCRIPT DRAMA SI PITUNG

In a peaceful village lived a young man named Si Pitung. He was known for his courage and compassion for others. However, behind the village's peace, there was a big problem. The people were oppressed by a cruel king.

Narator: The scene shifts to Pitung's house, where a dialogue takes place between Pitung's mother and Pitung.

(Si Pitung is helping his Mother with chores.)

Pitung's Mother: Pitung, my child, our village suffers under the King's rule. The crops are failing, and our people are hungry.

Pitung: I know, Mother. I can't just sit and watch anymore. I will fight for our people! (enthusiastically) Narator: After talking to his mother, Pitung then left for the village field to meet his friend Joko. They discussed their plan to defeat the tyrannical king.

Pitung: My friends, are you willing to help me defeat the tyrannical king?

Joko: Pitung, I will help you. But we need a plan. The King's guards are very strong.

Asep: I agree with Joko's statement; we cannot make decisions without careful consideration.

Narator: While the three were planning how to defeat the tyrannical king, Siti, Sipitung's sister, arrived and had a plan to defeat the tyrannical king by meeting with Elder Sari.

Siti: I have an idea. We should talk to Elder Sari. He lives deep in the forest not far from the village and may have some valuable advice for us on how to defeat the tyrant king.

Narator: After listening to Siti's advice, Sipitung, Joko, and Asep hurried to the forest not far from the settlement to meet Elder Sari. On their way to Elder Sari's house, they got lost. Coincidentally, at the same time, a wood collector named Umar passed by. Asep asked Umar where Elder Sari lived.

Asep: Excuse me, sir, do you know where Elder Sari's house is?

Umar: Yes, I know it. Just go straight, and when you reach the river, turn right. That's where Elder Sari's house is.

Asep: Thank you for the information, sir.

Umar: You're welcome

Narator: After receiving this information, the three of them hurried to Elder Sari's house. Upon arriving at Elder Sari's house, Joko knocked on the door and asked the occupants of the house.

Joko: Excuse me, is this the residence of Elder Sari?

Elder Sari: Yes, that's right. Why are you looking for me?

Pitung: Elder Sari, I would like to ask for your advice. Do you have any suggestions on how to defeat the tyrannical king?

Elder Sari: You seek to challenge the King? (with a surprised tone)

Elder Sari: It is a dangerous path. But I can give you this potion. It will grant you strength, but remember: true power lies in unity.

Pitung: Thank you Mr. Sari. We will unite the villagers! Together, we can take back what is rightfully ours! (In an enthusiastic tone)

Narator: After receiving the potion from Elder Sari, they hurried back to the village to gather an alliance. The scene then shifted to the kingdom of the tyrannical King Harun, who had learned of Pitung's plan to defeat him. (King Harun and Minister Budi discussed the unrest and Pitung's plan to overthrow King Harun.)

King Harun: Si Pitung is a pebble in my shoe. We must crush this rebellion before it spreads!

Minister Sartini: Your Majesty, perhaps we should offer the villagers some relief. It may quell their anger.

Captain Damar: I agree with Minister Sartini's opinion, my king.

King Harun: No! They must learn to fear me. Send Commander Raka to gather more troops.

Narator: The scene shifts to Sipitung, who has returned to the village after meeting Elder Sari. He takes the initiative to gather the villagers in the town square and gives a speech urging them to work together to defeat King Harun.

Pitung: Friends, the King may have power, but we have each other! We will rise against oppression!

Mr. Hasan: I agree, the taxes imposed by the King are too high! We can't hold out any longer. Pitung may be our last hope for freedom.

Mr. Amir: As a carpenter, I will help make tools and weapons to aid our struggle. We must unite and fight against this oppression!

Mrs. Rahma: "I and the other women will also support the fighters. Let's prepare food and shelter for those who are fighting for the freedom of our village

Poor villager: But what can we do against the King's army?

Pitung: We will use our knowledge of the land. We will strike at night, when they least expect it!

Narator: After hearing Pitung's speech, they agreed to work together to defeat the king. And they carried out their plan at night.

Narator: When night fell, Si Pitung led his friends into the palace grounds. Their hearts were pounding, but their spirits remained high.

Pitung: Remember your strength! We fight for our families, dan our future!

Narator: (They managed to get past the guard, but Anindita appeared and saw them and then reported it to the commander.)

Anindita: Commander, permission to report, I have found Pitung and his allies.

Commander Utari: Thank you for the information, Anindita. My team and I will head to where Pitung is located.

(Commander Utari arrived at the location and ambushed him).

Commander Utari: You think you can sneak into my palace? Guards, seize them!

Narator: (A fierce battle ensues. The villagers fight bravely but are outnumbered.)

Pitung: (Jumping into the fray), For our village! For freedom!

Narator: (The villagers rally together, using their knowledge of the terrain to their advantage.)

Narator: The scene shifts to the throne room, where Pitung meets King Harun.

Pitung: Your reign of terror ends today, King Harun!

King Harun: (Arrogantly) You think you can defeat me? I hold the power of the crown!

Pitung: Power means nothing without the people's trust! (After a heated discussion, they then fought.)

Narator: (After a long struggle, Si Pitung overcomes the King.) With a final strike, Si Pitung defeated King Harun, and the palace erupted in cheers from the villagers.

Village: We are free! Si Pitung, our hero!

Narator: (The villagers gather to celebrate their freedom.)

Chief Sekar Ayu: Today we reclaim our village! Let us build a future together, free from fear.

Villager Girl (Lina): Pitung, you have shown us the power of unity. We will never forget this day.

Pak Anto: Thank you, Pitung. The villagers will always remember your service.

Narator: After that day, Pitung became known as a hero in his village. Pitung became a legend, not only because of his courage, but also because he inspired resistance and hope in the hearts of his people.

END

